The 50 RecordKeeping Forms, included on this CD, are listed in the table of contents following the introduction and set of success tips for using this program. To make it easy for you to quickly get to any one of the desired forms listed in the table of contents, hold the “Control Key” (Ctrl) and click the name of the form you wish to view. To view additional forms, hold the Control Key and click “TOC” (which is at the bottom of every form) to return to Table of Contents, then you can select another form. This program allows you to view (read only) the forms and print them. If you wish to modify the forms, go to the file menu (upper left corner) and click “Save As” and save this document to “My Documents” on your hard drive (or the location of your choice).

Please note: The main purpose of this CD is for printing out various forms needed to keep in files or binder(s) that you can then use as a quick and/or portable reference guide for records pertaining to your rental properties.

INTRODUCTION

On this CD version of the updated and revised Rental Property RecordKeeper, the forms have been designed as a resource for quick reference and maintaining records related to all aspects of your rental holdings (property, resident, maintenance, income, and expense records). Unlike the Landlord’s Kit (180 rental forms), which provides forms so that you can communicate effectively and professionally with residents and others, the forms on this CD are for “your eyes only”, or for those helping you with management of the property. Most landlords (especially the majority who only do it on a part-time basis), try diligently to stay on top of the challenges of rental properties. Often however, there is not enough time in the day to handle full time jobs, landlording duties and keep track of the “administrative” side of the business, including all the recordkeeping that is needed to fully stay in control of your rental business (vital, even if you only own one or a few rentals).

SUCCESS TIP: Do not neglect the recordkeeping side of the business.

Included on this CD are some key forms that will provide you with what you need to develop a simple recordkeeping system that will help you be able to quickly reference vital records of your rental business. There is a wide assortment of forms provided (to aide you with keeping various types of records) and you may not need to utilize all the forms. The goal here is to provide enough varied forms to help you customize or compliment a recordkeeping system that will work best for you. Therefore, the best use of this CD is for you to choose the records that are most applicable and pertinent to your properties and managements needs, print and keep the forms in designated files or binders. Should you acquire many more rental properties, you may want to consider a software program to keep track of all your tenant files. When that time occurs, contact us for software recommendations, or go to the following website, MrLandlord.com/software.

The recordkeeping forms provided on this CD are to help you get or stay organized for greater success. These forms will help you:

- | | |
|-------------------------------------|---------------------------------------|
| 1) budget and plan better | 3) increase profits and growth |
| 2) avoid penalties and waste | 4) save management time |

SUCCESS TIP: Create a customized recordkeeping system that works best for you.

As you create or modify a recordkeeping system that will work best for you, I would suggest having a main file or having a notebook for each property address or location you own or manage, with sub-files or subcategories for all the forms related to that property. Each main file or notebook could be divided into subcategories, a) property records, b) resident records, c) maintenance records and d) payment records. You will find that the recordkeeping forms in this part of the book are also divided along those same subcategories. (Note: With multi-unit properties, it is further suggested that separate sub files be created for each individual unit). The main point and purpose of this CD is to encourage and enable you so that you do not make the costly mistake of neglecting to stay on top of the administrative and recordkeeping side of your business. Plus, as you will see, there are many cash-flow benefits to your business by keeping good records.

SUCCESS TIP: Fully know about your products (properties).

The more knowledge you have about your rental homes or units, the better you will be able to meet the needs of your customers and fill your vacancies faster and increase your cash flow. Selling someone on your property and all that it has to offer is far more than just running an ad and telling prospects who come to walk thru, "see what you think." Do you know how effective is your advertising? This CD includes an advertising report that can help you determine that. Are you getting as much profit as you can based on the property and the inventory you have available? Do you really know what your total inventory is? Landlords, who maximize their cash flow, utilize and promote the entire available inventory to them. Utilize the enclosed forms to have full and complete knowledge of your properties, and all that goes with them, including amenities and unique property features (for higher rent), larger than average floor plans, furniture, appliances, upgrades, garages and storage space for additional rent.

SUCCESS TIP: Review, update and track residents performance and life cycle.

Would you believe many landlords miss out on receiving late charges and some even rent because they don't keep accurate records of when rent was actually paid? There are also key times in the resident's life cycle that you don't want to inadvertently overlook. For example, making sure you send advance notice of anniversary dates and following a regular rent raising schedule can easily be missed. Such a schedule is available here. Before raising rent, examine which residents are your problem residents and perhaps not worth extending their rental agreement. And which ones are your most loyal and generating the most income and should not be neglected as long term residents. Records help to identify performance and problem patterns. This CD includes forms that keeps track of notices you have to give to residents throughout the year and thereby alerts you regarding the severity of a problem resident. It's easy to sometimes not even realize which residents over the year are giving you the most trouble. We even include a form to track the steps involved with eviction should a problem resident have to be taken to that extent. There are forms included here to track rental payments, miscellaneous income, and even laundry and vending income for those with multiunit buildings.

SUCCESS TIP: Perform systematic preventive maintenance.

So many landlords end up spending lots of money fixing maintenance problems that could have been avoided if preventive maintenance had been performed. Not only is fixing problems much more costly than preventing them, residents are not happy when they have to call about a maintenance problem. On the flip side, I discovered that residents greatly appreciate when periodic preventive maintenance checks are scheduled. Just today, I had a plumber stop by all of our rentals by (at his “slow” time and at his convenience) to check for any signs of minor leaks and potential plumbing issues. It’s suggested to change washers on faucets every year or other year. And obviously checking periodically to change furnace or air conditioning filters, installing weather stripping, cleaning gutters, and checking the operation of heating systems and smoke detectors are all examples of preventive maintenance can possibly save you from hundreds to thousands of dollars.

In addition, by scheduling preventive maintenance well in advance throughout the year, not only should your overall maintenance costs be lower, but, you should be able to better budget your maintenance costs and save tremendously on time you have to devote to maintenance issues, since you will not have to keep reacting to unexpected repairs that preventive maintenance helped you avoid. You will see that there are several maintenance checklists and forms on this CD. There are forms to record resident service requests and confirm work has been done, track minor repairs, major repairs and upcoming improvements and forms to establish preventive maintenance schedules at various intervals throughout the year: weekly, monthly, annually and even duties that are performed at irregular intervals. These forms will help you stay in total control of maintenance on your properties.

SUCCESS TIP: Monitor and maintain quick access to all your records, including important dates along with account, property and product information.

Amazingly some landlords yearly spend hundreds, if not thousands of dollars every year in penalties, simply because they miss a due date. It makes things easier when you can quickly and easily review at any time and be reminded of important due dates. In addition, save yourself many hours of searching by having all your important records and property information all in one place. I know for me, I can’t tell you how much time I used to waste looking up account numbers, model numbers and sizes for appliances, measurements for carpets, floor tile information, paint colors and types, and contact info for service people and vendors. This CD provides the recordkeeping forms you need to quickly reference all this information, so that it is available to you fast, right at your finger tips.

SUCCESS TIP: Evaluate periodically and systematically your income and expense records.

It’s always good to evaluate how much you are spending so that you can determine where you can cut costs. By knowing what you are spending, you can also obtain and compare quotes from other contractors of vendors. One of the best cash flow tips I have gotten from another landlord and real estate investor was to let contractors and vendors know, that while you believe in and value loyalty in working relationships, you still check to make sure that their prices competitive.

Though keeping an eye on expenses is important, really keep an eye on your income. Do you clearly know how much is your current “net” cash flow, (your total income minus “all” your expenses)? On this CD, we’ve included recordkeeping forms for various expenses so you can print, refer to and have visual records, and a true sense of all the money coming in and all the money going out.

I would encourage you to set cash flow goals each year, and throughout the year utilize the enclosed forms to see if you are staying on target with your goals. Upon periodic evaluation, if you see that there is too much money being spent or not as much coming in as you anticipated, you can make strategy adjustments, using some of the income generating forms and tips found in earlier forms in the RecordKeeper. Do not be like many landlords, who only look at their “numbers” come tax time and then are discouraged that the numbers are lower than expected or not any better than the year before. One of the main ways I am able to keep improving the profitability of my rental homes and apartments, year after year, is by periodically evaluating numbers throughout the year. Don’t just hope your cash flow is improving. Utilize the forms on this CD to print and periodically and systematically record and check your numbers to see which direction you’re headed. When you see the numbers not moving strongly in the right direction, this should serve as a reminder to you and prompt you to continue to be a proactive landlord, and to go back and review the profit building strategies discussed in The Landlord’s Kit, Mr. Landlord Newsletters and found on MrLandlord.com, so that you can stay in total control of your rental properties. If you have never seen a copy of the Mr. Landlord newsletter, call 1-800-950-2250 and you can request a free sample issue.
